

“ I see the progressive growth of apathy within our western society. I see people's overwhelming tendency to minimize the brilliance of each moment. I think the key to life is to realize that there will never be another you, and because there will never be another human who could experience the world through a subjective lens quite like you can, that each of us are essentially living art making history. Boredom is a sickness. I urge you to not waste time, but rather charge straight fucking ahead at life itself. ”

Darren Bennett
Powell River, Canada